Storm In Spring

1946

I was startled by the sudden total darkness
And stunned by claps of deafening thunder
Like the bursting of bombs.
I thought of the beastly hordes
That yesterday ravaged the earth
Strewing their path with waste, destruction, and paralyzing fear.
Then a flash of lightning
And from the dark, threatening sky
Came an April cloudburst—
A drenching rain.
Like a liberating army of Freedom
It pounded its volleys; it overan the earth
Cleansing and quelling once again
The mad thirst for Power.

Awake! Awake! all people
Who think and feel and pray
To be delivered from a slumberless sleep
Troubled with the nightmare War.
Rise again in the cloudy dawn
In gratitude for a new day
For us to live and learn and work
Each for his brother's cause.
The first rays of morning light
Upon the still dripping branches
Reveal a new pattern from old familiar forms.

PRESS NOTICES
Scrapbook

Thumbing back through the pages of our old days with the "Phillips Follies" company, we can see ourselves as the audiences must have seen us. Funny, we never noticed it before, but . . .

These first few pages, now—just look at them! As straight and shrinkingly neat as if we'd used a ruler to paste the clippings: we were so afraid, at first, of doing something the least bit wrong. That was when we frist joined the "Follies" company, and a scared little bunch of sub-sub-understudies we were! When one of those glamorous, fourth-year stars walked by, how we envied their poise, and their daring in such matters as walking boldly up the "Down" stairs, while we tip-toed a little nervously up the "Up" stairs. And as for OK's—why, we couldn't have ventured out of our lockers without at least two teachers' signatures on a slip of paper loaded down with all the facts, including the number on our elevator tickets.

The thrill of exploration was ours when we investigated the room numbers on the little white cards; and we were so proud when we found the much-renowned 214 and 215 the first week, in spite of our nightmares! We were assigned lockers, and weren't so sure we loved that bottom-locker—but naturally we didn't say anything about that . . . Sitting back in the girls' gym, the mysteries of "student government" were hardly cleared up by the gales of laughter bursting from the audience, caused by—apparently—a low, indistinguishable mumble from the stage . . . And when June of 1943 came 'round, how careful we were to inform all and sundry that we were 'sophomores," and no longer mere "rats."

By the second year, however, our attitude had changed. Several little incidents kept us from getting too sure of ourselves; but we had learned the knack of bouncing up the wrong side of the steps at a clip which almost guaranteed immunity from any strolling representative of law and order. We had also discovered that next to nobody felt the slightest interest in whethr or not we had a legal OK; and toward the last of the year, cautious investigation showed that, if the manner in which we carried it off was right, it didn't even matter if there was anything written on the paper. We were left to fend for ourselves for lockers, and—not to be rude, but—we really much preferred what we got at the cost of two good fingernails and a pencil-point; it was far more likely to be a top-locker, though why the supply had suddenly expanded, we never could learn.

We did or died for our own schedules that year; and after a boring, not to mention frustrating, session with the Schedule Committee, discovered that we had come out with just about what we would have if the school had made out the little white cards . . .Our fourth semester, Tommy Dix, of "Best Foot Forward" fame, came to the school; and every girl there wore red, or something equally eye-catching.

Our third year, we were cocky—and why not? We had top lockers, with mirrors, and pictures of June Allyson and Van Johnson taped inside; and we did our daily dozen around Miss Fenruddocke's corner without even a mollifying slip of blank paper. The entire school was being repainted, and were we glad of it! All the witty notes written on the old paint had gotten stale, and anyway, we'd thought up a lot of better ones.

The "Big Five" Junior-Senior proms were started that year; and we were irritated at having to say in November who we would be going with in January—how on earth could anybody, even us, know?

There was a change in the plan of registration: old classes on one day, new ones the next; and we gave expert opinions as to the varying virtues of each system, which some people listened to—lower semesters at least!—and which the authorities paid absolutely no attention to, although no one ever mentioned the fact.

Our sixth semester, we tackled "Beowulf"; and were in anguish because we couudn't seem to understand how to do "discussion questions," and the test on it was nothing but that . . . A group of Miss Brock's pupils who had contributed to a common library formed a library club, the "Reader's Refuge"—after Miss Brock regretfully vetoed the first name of "Readers' Refuse."

Clem Zbinden proved he could rival "Sneezy" Dennis, by sneezing his way steadily through a recorded auditorium program; and when Lola Mae Jones and Bill Achor were taken into the Honor Society in the sixth semester, we regretted briefly—quite briefly—not having studied more. We were so very proud when Berma Dale Kyle was elected our second associate, because she was the first of us to be a G.O. officer.

April 13 was a beautifully sunny day, and the auditorium was as bright as we had ever seen it, for the memorial service for President Roosevelt, who had died the day before. We gathered in there again on May 8, for VE day, although we thought—out loud—that we should have been let out of school.

We came back to school in September of 1945 in a world at peace—but not very much so: the News had just begun to be printed again, and most of its front page was covered with stories of more strikes.

Nearly everybody had two lockers, as a matter of course; and seniors had legal privileges—but not as many as we took. There was a definite feeling, we discovered, attached to being a senior, but it may have been just the multiplied number of cards and blanks we had to fill out. . . We practically controlled the General Organization: Jimmy Smith was first associate, seventh semester, and Pat Bowers second associate. But eighth semester was the real triumph—when we elected Donna Pledger president, the fifth case of "petticoat" rule in the history of school!

We went back an hour to Central Standard Time, from War Saving Time; and back a half-hour to the old school time; and there was an unprecedented epidemic of tardiness, until we got our systems and our alarm clocks readjusted. Even worse was when the bus—and street car drivers went out on strike; some of us walked; some few were allowed to bring the family car; and some stayed home.

We felt like leaving school when confronted with "Hamlet" and a semester thesis, both in one semester, but somehow we not only stayed, but did both and lived. . . . Guy Woodliff and Harry Cook were our star orators, and went around winning contest after contest.

As a final gesture to our public (admiring, we hoped), we gave the last act of the "Phillips Follies": "Stage Door," by Ferber and Kaufman, was our Senior Flay, as well as the last clipping pasted in our scrapbook. And a creditable production (we thought) it was, in spite of the agony of mind most of the seniors went through.

But turning the last page, where we gleefully slapped down the last clipping—look!—all those loose clippings we never could decide where to put . . . "Defense"—then "War"—and finally "Victory" Loan drives in which we always went 'way over the top . . . those seventh period tests made less agonizing by the melodic presence of the ROTC out one window, and the band out the other . . . "HARRY GEORGE'S!" . . . the football team, bounding gingerly over to East Park in their bare feet . . . Pat Bowers' tap-dancing . . . would-be cheer leaders dancing madly about at try-outs . . . those ever-lovin' couples: Thea Burnett and Guy Woodliff; and Bettye Joyce Smith and Emmett Wiginton . . . not to mention the two famed Middlebrooks—Kathryn and Christine . . . and the equally famed Alfred and Ralph Jaffe . . . and Thelma Ann Vaughan complaining loudly and bitterly that she had to go mad in every Dramatic Club play she was in!

That just about finished up all our clippings—loose or tied down . . . A few may have slipped out of the book in four years' time, but you remember them, and our days with the "Phillips Follies." May your own scrapbook go on to greater things from this one!

Prevues of Coming Attractions

The Management of the "World Theater" has arranged to present during this next twenty years, the cream-of-the-crop of super-colossal screen successes for your enjoyment.

Beginning May 17, 1956:

FEATURE ATTRACTION

At last—after three months of solemn meditation and careful study of the film, censorship czar Bobby Barth has permitted the release of that torrid tidbit, "Forever Emerald—" the sultriest sizzler since the traffic light changed to green, starring that dramatic dream-girl straight from three Broadway hits, Lola Mae Jones, and featuring that zany gangster Clem Zbinden, whose first show drove Bob Hope and Danny Kaye to a joint suicide-pact atop the tower of Radio City. See glamorous Marguerite Kent, the "Powers' Perfect Pinup" modeling the feathery, frothy evening creations of Mlle. Edna Earle Thompson. Wonder at the magic Marvels of Monroe Teague as he whisks out a mystic handkerchief to make Boulder Dam evaporate. Thrill to the elfin steps of ballerina Betty Mouat—newest soloist of Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo—dancing to key-board queen Donna Pledger's mellow classic "Blue Swing." Hear the husky voice of Pat Bowers sighing in song. New starlets all were discovered by talent scout Roy Martin, so renowned for his preference for red-heads. Produced by Joe Evans, Esq.—reigning king of Hollywood producers, and penned by scenarist Sam Stephenson (who was admittedly influenced by the French drama "Cyrano," an ancient work of a similar name popular way back in 1945), this spectacular extravaganza was filmed by Tommy Patton.

NEWSREEL

Complete films are being shown of the inauguration of new UN head Fletcher Thorington, including the address of US Senator Charles Terry, and an analysis of its importance by Harry Cook, famed radio commentator and editorial writer for the New York SUN. Taking charge of the organizations' entire secretarial body will be Maxine Keith, efficiency expert.

Turbulent courtroom scenes direct from the capital show lawyer Jack Bridges staunchly defending the rights of all American boys against a bill proposed by the AEA to force all high school students to take four years of math.

In the medical world, medicos "Bo" Miller and George Rudd are sharpening the scalpels—be patient, Mr. Stough. Eminent psychologist Sam Glenn, having pondered over the question many years, now offers conclusive proof that "Hamlet was crazy!"

The Mad Scientist does it again. Bobby McElvain in his pent-house rustic laboratory reveals his discovery of a synthetic for black widow spider webs.

Guy Woodliff, best high pressure salesman in the nation, sells, from the stock of "Jimmy Smith Furniture Store" number 581, a love seat to Miss Anders.

Charles Hooper, oil company executive in South America, negotiates the contract for the largest amount of petroleum ever exported.

LaVerne Stringfellow, dare-devil test pilot, gives the new rocket (designed by Hoyt Harris) its trial flight. These ships are being manufactured by the dynamic industrialist, Charles Kilgore.

SPORTS REEL

Pictures by television of the 1956 Olympics featured for the first time a football struggle between gridiron stars of the entire universe. Grasping honors for the U. S. was the "Elite Eleven" headed by All-Americans Charles Aycock, Ralph and Alfred Jaffee, and Joe-Joe Hawkins, with Emmett Wiginton, revered coach, spurring them onward. Copping honors in the tennis division was Robert Pattillo.

TRAVELOGUE

"The World and They That Dwell Therein" is a geographical short showing the four corners of the earth, narrated by Albert Horn and Lawrence Sheffield, who, for the last five years, have lived the life of Riley atop freight cars from Rio to Reno. This educational epic gives camera shots of "Monkey" Shealey, riding the surf with the Navy in Hawaii, while Diane Gardner suns at Daytona Beach. In India, (since that's where all "Shieks" belong) Albert Jacobs has his haren. From the nation's capitol come scenes of Sally Allen, newest deb to set Washington society all a-flutter. In Africa, one sees two adventuring missionaries, Faye Tynes and Betty Joyce Smith, converting the cannibals.

The Army's newest secret weapon is on display. To encourage enlistment, Catherine and Christine Middlebrooks now drill the cadets at West Point.

ALSO SELECTED SHORT SUBJECTS

Virginia Brown, dietitian, presents the before and after of her ten day reducing course. Mary Emily Wiginton, chosen best dressed woman of the year by New York style experts, models selections from her extensive wardrobe. Commentary by designer Betty Sue Grady is added. First movie sketches of the "Gilder Girls" drawn by Katherine Gilder, who replaces Varga on Esquire's staff, have appeared.

Adele Schooley, radio director, explains how, under the supervision of Carolyn Tynes, those speaking over her network will have that genuine Southern accent.

Don't miss the big show—Admittance? Well, imagination, luck, a queer twist of Fate, with a surtax of a lot of work!

Variety

A leading drama critic reports the closing May thirtieth of the "Phillips Follies." The cast of this production have trod the boards together for an average of four years (some of the more thorough found a few extra rehearsals necessary), so is with regret they see the approach of the final performance. The Phillips Opera House will be quite lonely without the following cast in their familiar roles:

Alfred Jaffe mooning over his frequent trips to the blue-grass country;

Florence Gothberg and Elizabeth Milton on all the girls' athletic teams;

Thelma Ann Vaughan with her frantic attempts to do fifty things at once;

Joe Horsley breaking a bone during football seasen:

Alieta Morrow starring in the campaign productions;

Allen DeVan and his mighty "low";

"Monkey" Shealey and her ever-present knitting bag;

Dianne Gardner talking about Benny;

Marie Morewitz and her constant giggle;

Albert Horn's fanatic desire to argue;

Anita Mobley finishing her lunch before the second bell;

Dot Teal and Margaret Mathews followed by a steady stream of whistles;

Berma Dale Kyle being elected to every office;

Peggy Bethune in her green Cadillac;

Donald Spann and Hubert Norris taking pictures—when their flash bulbs work right;

Dora Jean Connor attired in a Woodlawn sweater.

Seventh Avenue between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets has seen many names in "bright lights," but those of this cast have been particularly outstanding. Some may better be remembered as the following:

The Dimple—Don Mayhall

The Face—Marguerite Kent

The Smile—Pat Bowers

The Shape—Charles Aycock

The Hair-do—Joe-Joe Hawkins

The Voice—Betty Sue Gray

The theater world will watch with bated breath to see what "young" actors succeed these famous stars in their favorite parts in th most memorable production ever staged.

Curtain Calls

The graduating seniors of 1946, having concluded their last act, now take their bows, and while autographing programs wish to endow future players with their various and sundry belongings and crafts. As each takes his Curtain Call, he selects a recipient in the audience, to wit:

Bill Achor, Lola Mae Jones, and Frances Goldstein regretfully leave their ability to make "T's" and their seats in the Honor Society to Henry Fell, Issabella Smith, and Betty Cohen, respectively.

Bettye Joyce Smith and Edith Tanner bequeath their R.O.T.C. costumes to any ambitious belles who have the spirit and strength to keep up with their companies.

Marguerite Kent, Dorothy Teal, and Margaret Mathews leave their swell appearances and "footlight" personalities to Betty Jane Tate, Fredda Hansen, and Ann Miller.

Cathryn Freeman and Ingrid Lassen leave those ever-present first row smiles to Betty Ross Armstrong and Ann White.

With best wishes, Jim Smith passes on his executive ability as master of ceremonies to Birdie Tate.

Charles Binion leaves!!!

Well-thatched Don Mayhall carefully assigns a comb to Robert Collins with the condition that he use it every hour on the hour.

Clinton McGhee leaves his skill on the dance floor to Billy Hale.

John Miller regretfully leaves his charm with the ladies to Edgar Mulvaney.

Dale Solomon leaves "Cookie's" parking space to "Wee Willie" Watson's convertible (It converts you into a palsied wreck)!

Margy Baughn bequeaths her inevitable wit to Bootsie Deaver as comedienne for succeeding casts.

Roy Martin leaves to his brother Don his effective characterization of winning charm and personality.

Carrol Hutto's "lowing" abilities go to Charles Lamar. Allen Devan and Hubert Norris cede their achievements in this field to George Bissell.

Sally Allen leaves her many and multi-colored costumes to her sister, Mary Elizabeth.

Clem Zbinden and Leo Creest leave their quick wit and humor to Alton Rikard and Boo McWhorter as future stooges and comedians.

Joe Evans endows Wiley Clements with all of his poetic inspirations.

Albert Jacobs leaves his hot clarinet to Bill Mathis.

Pat Bowers leaves her place in the Band to anyone who can get along with Mr. Mayer.

Hoyt Harris and Robert Patillo bestow their tennis talents on Tommy Chapman.

Charles Fell respectfully bequeaths his browning ability and his top locker (which won't lock)—his two dearest possessions—to Buddy White.

So, having disposed of all personal and tangible properties stored backstage for lo, these many years, the stars and featured playrs of the Academy Award Production of 1946 take their last CURTAIN CALL.

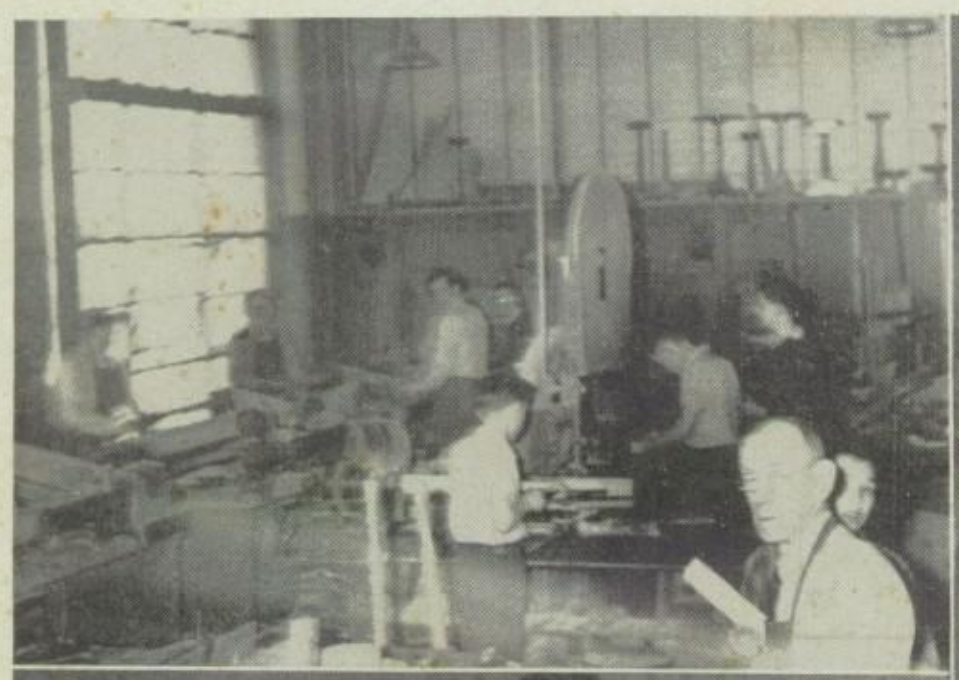
TALENT SCOUT SELECTIONS



The Grand Finale

This is it! This is the ultimate conclusion for which we have rehearsed for uncounted nights and days. This is the biggest production in which we have ever starred. Let us hope that it will not be the last.

The stage behind us appears flooded with light. Those before us fade into obscurity. The challenge of life sounds forth from the darkness. The test of learning beckons us—whether we can make knowledge work for us by turning it into wisdom or just let it leak out, stagnant, as it entered.

Many ways are there that invite us. Many are hazardous and perilous. A few are steep and hard to climb. Others are obstructed by obstacles. Some require a physical endeavor; others, a mental struggle. Some are easier than others, but all are difficult, for this is life. It makes no great difference whether we choose the high road or the low road, but when we have selected our field of exploration—something we really like and sincerely want to follow—let us move forward determined to succeed.

During this long fight for success we must at all times maintain our faith. Self-confidence is essential to our well-standing in the world of today or tomorrow or any day. We must try to do our best at all times and every succeeding time try to do a bit better. If we feel prone to doubt that we can readily fill the roles of certain leading actors of today, perhaps it would be boasting to employ as our own personal motto, "Who can do better than I?"

The character of friendship is bound by all the laws of nature to play a leading role in our life. The perpetual quality of friendship we must acquire if we wish to star in a leading part. Then, too, we might use this bit of philosophy—one should go one-half the way all the time and all the way one-half the time if he can have loving and mutual friendship all the time.

As the days of progress pass by and grow into weeks and months and years, we shall then become the leading actors of the stage. We shall be judged—as most men are judged—by our past. Title roles will be awarded to those esteemed in virtue. To get this respect from others, we must deserve it, and if we deserve it, we'll get it.

"Rehearsals" will be long and tedious, but we shall attain the goal and find success in quantity and quality undreamed of before. We shall star in performances witnessed by millions. But now at the present, preparations are being begun for the next production, even as the curtain comes down on the closing scene of our largest show in history.
